POPULATION OF LINCOLN, 65,000.

In the July number of The North American Review, which opens the one hundred and fifty-third volume and the seventy-seventh year of this well-known and widely-circulated monthly, the discussion on the right uses of wealth, which had attracted marked attention in recent issues, is resumed this time by Baron de Hirsch, the well-known Hebrew philanthropist, who has done and is doing so much for the benefit of the poor and oppressed of his own race. His contribution is not long, but the frank statement which he makes regarding his plans in "My Views on Philanthropy" cannot fail to command wide attention. This article opens the number. Mr. Clarkson's article on "The Politician and the Philanthropist" in the Review for May has called forth a spirited reply from the Hon. Dorman B. Eaton, formerly president of the national Civil-Service Commission. Professor Richard T. Ely, of Johns Hopkins University, contributes a paper of great value on "The Inheritance of Property." "The Relations of Literature to Society" are considered in an entertaining way by Mrs. Amelia E. Barr, who contends that good writers receive all the attention from the social world that they deserve. The last of the principal articles in this interesting number is from the pen of Professor Charles A. Briggs, whose relations with the Union Theological Seminary were the subject of the great discussion at the recent session of the Presbyterian General Assembly. Fourteen pages are devoted to Notes and Comments on a variety of timely and interesting topics. Several of these articles are of special interest to women, and are cordially recommended to their attention.

Scribner's Magazine for July (beginning the tenth volume) has its leading article on a subject which attracts particular attention at this season—"Speed in Ocean Steamers." This issue contains also two illustrated out-of-door articles—one on "Lizard Hunting in the Spanish Pyrenees," and the other on fishing for the black sea-bass on the Pacific Coast. The number is unusually rich in fiction, containing four short complete stories: by George A. Hibbard, the late John Elliott Curran, Edith Wharton, and George L. Catlin, U. S. Consul at Zurich. There are three articles of political importance—one on "Starting a Parliament in Japan" by Professor John H. Wigmore, of the University of Tokyo; another giving a civil engineer's glimpse of the revolutionary Republic of Hayti; and a third summarizing the romantic history of outlaws on the Mexican border. Poems by John Hay and Mrs. Jas. T. Fields, complete a number of remarkably varied interest. The frontispiece is the last one of Mr. J. R. Weguelin's notable full-page illustrations selected for Odes of Horace.

Outing for July offers a tempting array of good things for all lovers of pure, wholesome literature and elegant, artistic work. "Beyond the Metropolis of the Mountains," by Ernest Ingersoll; "Rowing as a Recreation for Women," Chase Mellen; "Boating Life on the Upper Thames," F. Campbell Moller, M.D.; "A Chapter in Lacrosse," Lionel Moses, Jr.; "Scientific Tennis Strokes," J. Farmlay Paret; "With Rod and Line Through Ireland," T. Murphy; "American Cycling and its Founder," C. D. Pratt, and the usual editorial, records, poems, etc., complete one of the best numbers we have seen.

An admirable full-page portrait of Oliver Wendell Holmes forms the frontispiece of the July Arena. Probably the most notable paper in this issue is Edgar Fawcett's "Plutocracy and Sabotage in New York." With the conspicuous impartiality which has ever marked the management of The Arena, the editor this month publishes a reply to his own paper on "Socialism," by the well-known Nationalist and Christian Socialist, Rev. Francis Bellamy. The editorials, "An Epoch-making Drama," "The Present Revolution in Theological Thought," and "The Conflict Between Ancient and Modern Religious Thought in the Presbyterian Church," are bright, vigorous and suggestive. The Arena is a library in itself, treating all the great living problems of the hour in a comprehensive manner, and containing a vast amount of entertaining and instructive matter in its stories, character sketches, biographical and critical papers.

"The lady of Fort St. John," the new serial which begins in the July number of the Atlantic Monthly, is a story of one of the lords of Aenda, Charles de la Tour. Professor Lancelotti contributes a paper on "Underground Christian Rome," in which he tells of the discovery of the Christianity of an ancient Roman family from the excavation of their ancient burial place. There is nothing better in the whole number, however, than Octave Thanet's paper on "Plantation Life in Arkansas." It is admirably written. "The Story of a Long Inheritance," by Wm. M. Davis, which, although no one would ever suspect, is devoted to tornadoes; the "Neutrality of Switzerland," an able paper by W. D. McCracken, showing some of the advantages of a neutral state, and an article on "Tintoret, the Shakespeare of Painters," by William R. Thayer, are other features of the number.

A WEDDING COSTUME.

OLIVE HARPER DESCRIBES ONE THAT IS PERFECT.

Who Shall Decide Which is the More Becoming, a Tailor Made Costume or the Costume That Gives a Young Woman the Title of "the Summer Girl?"

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, June 18.—It is truly pleasant to the mind to find consistency in anything nowadays, particularly in anything that relates to womankind, who heretofore have never had the reputation of being consistent in anything. And what brings forth this sapient remark? A bridal costume all covered with true lover's knots. If that is not consistency I don't know what it is. And, sisters, take note of it, and how lovely it is; but all the same, I don't know that a row of coffins or weeping willows would exactly be the thing for a widow to wear on her mourning gowns. But the wedding dress is so pretty, and aside from the veil and orange blossoms, the gown could be worn for full dress occasions certainly a year.

A TRUE LOVER'S KNOT IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

It is made of cream colored peau de soie, cut en princesses and laced up front and back with satin ribbon, which ends in a true lover's knot. The yoke and sleeves and ruff are of lace, in the now so popular true lover knot pattern, and at the foot in front is a ruffle of the same headed by festoons of the same knots sewn on in position, while just under each is a tiny spray of orange blossoms. On waist, sleeves and around the train is an embroidery of silver and pearl beads. The back is shown in the small illustration, and the manner in which the veil is pinned on leaving it to hang down like the ribbon on a nurse's cap. A tulle veil could be worn if preferred.

The reason I have been so explicit about this is because the style is so very useful a one for all who can wear the princess dress, and it can be arranged to suit any evening material. Satin, snail, veiling or crepe, as well as faille and moire or even cashmere make exquisite gowns modeled on this plan, with such variations as circumstances would suggest. I should have added that the ruff and collar and bust have a narrow trimming of ostrich feathers, and a wider band is placed at the bottom.

I think that this same general style of a dress would be exquisite in pearl gray crepe de chine or fine Henrietta cloth, adapting it to the wearer's individual taste in small details. Individuality in dress is greatly sought after now. I remember being greatly pleased with a silver gray cashmere gown designed for herself by Ella Wheeler Wilcox. It hung loose from just above the bust, was clasped on the shoulders by oxidized silver buttons, and had a deep Watteau plait in the back; from under this a silver belt hung loosely around and defined the waist, and around the bottom was a silver band. Under the low waist was a gray silk jersey covered with steel beads. The way she got this wonderfully graceful effect was by wrapping a soft bathing sheet around her and draping it up on the hips and into the Watteau plait, and then the pins were left in and the dress cut by it. The whole had a classical effect.

TAILOR MADE OR SUMMER GIRL?

Who shall decide between a tailor made gown or a summer dress, all lace and frills and dainty colorings? Indeed it is hard to say which is the prettier, but each has its uses. The tailor gown here has just been finished for a young lady who has gone to England, and was of lenden gray cloth with a garniture of gold passementerie. The skirt is draped elegantly, and the coat is lined with white faille, and there is a vest of the same with flat gold buttons. White gloves are worn with it. It has all the neatness of tailor make, without its usual severity. The lace costume is made up over pale pink satin, and the picture shows better than words can tell how it is made, and a girl can see her own possibilities in such a gown at a glance. The pannel is covered with pink chiffon.
